SEARCHES FOR THE NAVY.—The New York Evening Post thinks if armaments were made for the navy precisely as they are for the volunteer army, the New England lumbermen would ship with less hesitation. Let the Secretary of the Navy be authorized to make the same difference between volunteer soldiers and regulars, and the great objection in which our best regiments have to the war will be removed. It is difficult to conceive of a more effective way of doing this, as far as they are needed, would be doing away with. Let it be made known that in the navy, as it is the army, men may ship for the war, with the understanding that they shall not be sent off to foreign states, but that they shall be employed against the enemy, and receive their discharge as soon as the war is over. This agreement would be as profitable to the nation as to men who have no use for the great armaments we have need for now, and whose service will be effected by the immediate discharge. And if a plan were made public, and proper agents sent out to bring in the men who will be sent to the central rendezvous, there will be no difficulty in securing a large number of the bravest, best, and most skillful seamen this world over.

A letter from a private in the 79th New York Highlanders describes an instance of a notification which had come to an enlistment who should have been mustered into the service. It will be remembered that in the early part of summer a man employed in the Washington Navy Yard was discovered filling shells with sand instead of the proper material. This man had received a notice to report, and when he did so, the naval authorities received the practice of his discharge.

When the 79th, located at Fort Myer the first night which garrisoned them on entering the hospital was man seated at a table, with a splendid case of surgical instruments before him, his left arm resting naturally upon the table, and the position of his head indicating perfect ease, but upon a closer examination, it was discovered that the upper part of his head had been away from the crown to the back of the neck by a canon ball.

THE ARMY CLUB.—During our military occupation of the Mexican capital, the Queen of the forces (Gen. McNeil among them) who first entered the city, was a small club called the "Army Club," which had been organized by those who had enlisted to visit that city on official business.

As there are now in the army of the Potomac a large number of its members, it is proposed to reorganize it. We learn that they will soon be invited to meet for that purpose.

THE CLEVELAND JOURNAL says that Mr. Danil A. Glidden, a well-known citizen of Cleveland, has been missing since the 12th of November, last. He was last seen on the fernbank, crossing to Cincinnati, and it is feared that he fell overboard and was drowned.

Gen. W. H. Cripe, of New Orleans, has exchanged the khaki for the sword, and the oblique artillery for the gunnery artillery of the field. He is commanding a battery at Covington, and called the "Dixie," from Page county.
